In a portrait which will be appearing in BBC's "Fantastic Who" on Monday, a BBC First? new series is announced. Dr. Inoue, reports the BBC's news.com, a doctor who is an exact replica of the Doctor Who character, apparently based upon a Japanese artist (as others have already pointed out) but he uses a Cyberman-like head. That will be quite amusing. Q: How to use the asp.net Razor engine from a.net core project? I just discovered that we can use the asp.net Razor engine from a.net core project. Seems like it should be quite useful, but I couldn't find any good samples of how to use it. I was trying to add a asp.net core mvc project as a reference to our existing asp.net mvc project, but the mvc projects only have a default view template, but no Razor file. Edit: There are many related questions, but none seems to contain the complete information. How to use asp.net Razor from a.net core project?
