Empire: Total War Razor1911.This subproject is one of many research subprojects utilizing the resources provided by a Center grant funded by NIH/NCRR. The subproject and investigator (PI) may have received primary funding from another NIH source, and thus could be represented in other CRISP entries. The institution listed is for the Center, which is not necessarily the institution for the investigator. Gene therapy has the potential to offer major advantages over vaccination in the treatment of infectious diseases. The development of an effective adeno-associated virus (AAV) vector presents a major challenge for gene therapy. Even though AAV genomes are relatively stable in the absence of integration, these genomes frequently integrate into the genome of the host cell. AAV vectors have been shown to integrate in the host cell with an average of 10.2 kb near the proto-oncogene, src. Other studies have shown the promoter sequence of the mouse tumor virus, polyoma, present in the AAV genome can
