cell invasion by down-regulating Smad2 expression in human gastric cancer. Vitexin

(2',4'-dihydroxy-6'-methoxychalcone) is a type of flavonoid isolated from the plant Vitex negundo, which has been demonstrated to have anti-cancer effects. The purpose of the present study was to evaluate the molecular mechanism by which vitexin exerts its anti-cancer activity in human gastric cancer. The effect of vitexin treatment on the invasion of gastric cancer cells was determined using Matrigel invasion assays. The levels of Smad2 phosphorylation and protein expression were measured by Western blotting. The Smad2 gene promoter activity and Smad2 mRNA expression were analyzed by luciferase reporter assays and real-time PCR, respectively. The effect of Smad2 overexpression on vitexin-induced cell invasion was also analyzed.

Vitexin inhibited the invasion of gastric cancer cells by down-regulating the expression of Smad2 and Smad2 phosphorylation. Overexpression of Smad2 in gastric cancer cells partially reversed the inhibitory effects of vitexin on the invasion of gastric cancer cells. Moreover, the Smad2 gene promoter activity and Smad2 mRNA expression were significantly decreased by vitexin treatment. These results suggest that vitexin suppresses human gastric cancer cell invasion by inhibiting the phosphorylation and expression of Smad2.Q: Why is the new object created in a constructor called an example? In this code:
